

TROUBLING IRELAND

“SUCKERS”

Pauline Beatrice Goggin

“SUCKERS”

Pauline Beatrice Goggin

These sweets are made to give a short, false sense, of energy but in effect, each “suck” promotes exhaustion, aids apathy, lethargy and paralysis.

For maximum effect, eat the rock candy at times of rising energy and radical ideas of protest or contest. Continuing ingestion of the “Suckers” will have a cumulative sedating effect because of the addictive nature of the main ingredients and maintain bloated sluggishness and acceptance of austerity, youth unemployment, inequality, poverty and decreasing social justice. Offer to family and friends as often as possible so that you won't feel excluded with the rise of growing movements towards government reform and other initiatives to safeguard democracy, nationally or internationally.

(However should you resist this particular temptation, fear not, as fluoride and other substances being added to the national water supply has been shown to have a similar ‘dumbing down’ effect and this has been suggested as a reason why the Irish have lost their sense of “fight” which was a national characteristic of the people when the oppressor was seen as exterior and “other” rather than as an integrated force within the national parliamentary system.)

Known ingredients: Sugar, sugar, sugar, sugar, sugar, sugar, sugar, sugar, sugar, sugar, and sugar.

Pauline Beatrice Goggin (The Public Worry Project) Website: www.theresnoplacelikehome.ie